Ramsay-McCormack Building in Birmingham listed to the National Register

The Ramsay-McCormack Building in Birmingham was listed in the National Register of Historic Places on January 30, 2009.

Constructed in 1929-1930, this ten-story Art Deco style office building is the most prominent building in Ensley, which was then home to the largest steel mill complex in the Birmingham District. Erskine Ramsay (1864-1953) was one of the Magic City's most important industrial, commercial, civic and philanthropic leaders from the late nineteenth through the mid-twentieth centuries. He and his business partner, George B. McCormack, were involved in many ventures, including real estate in downtown Ensley.

The National Register of Historic Places is the nation's official list of cultural resources worthy of preservation.

The Alabama Historical Commission is the official state agency responsible for preserving, protecting, and interpreting Alabama's historic places.

To protect, preserve, and interpret Alabama's historic places is the mission of the Alabama Historical Commission, Alabama's state agency for historic preservation.
